◆ U.S. authorities reportedly paid Joran van der Sloot $25,000 in a sting operation in Aruba in exchange for information about where Alabama teenager Natalee Holloway's body could be found. Authorities delayed arresting him because they were trying to help build a murder case against him. Sources say van der Sloot told them he pushed Holloway and her head hit a rock. He said her body was buried near a construction site close to his parents' house. But the information proved to be false. Van der Sloot is now charged with murdering a young woman in Peru.

◆ The Dow Jones industrials climbed back above 10,000 Wednesday briefly after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said the economy is still recovering. Later, one analyst said that BP may have to file for bankruptcy because of the Gulf oil spill and that made stocks tumble. The Dow Jones Industrials Average ended the day down at 9,899.25; dropping 40.73 points.

◆ It's shaping up as a tough year for the Gore family. In May of last year, former Vice President Al Gore's daughter divorced her husband.
