TWC Presidential Search Update

The search committee for Tennessee Wesleyan College's next president has set a timeline for the selection process after officially opening the call for candidates.

Resumes are being accepted now through Friday, January 14, 2011. After that date, the committee will evaluate the candidates, weighing them against the needs of the school and community. The top five candidates will be interviewed by the committee in early March. That pool will then be narrowed to three finalists who will be brought to the campus for a series of interviews and meetings with members of both the TWC and Athens communities.

The selection of Tennessee Wesleyan's next president is expected to take place in late April.

The position became open following the resignation of former president Dr. Steve Condon earlier this year.
