NATIONAL & WORLD NEWS

◆ The Congressional Budget Office says Social Security's trust funds are getting worse and will run out of money in about 2037.

◆ The government-appointed panel investigating the cause of the financial crisis says the meltdown occurred because government officials and Wall Street executives ignored warning signs and failed to manage risks. The Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission says the Bush and Clinton administrations, the current and previous Federal Reserve chairmen, and Treasury Secretary Geithner all bear some responsibility for allowing the crisis to happen. The panel also criticized bankers who got rich by making trillions of dollars in risky investments.

◆ A car bomb ripped through a funeral tent in Baghdad on Thursday, killing at least 48 people and triggering skirmishes between Iraqi troops and demonstrators angry about security failures.

◆ The Northeast dug-out of another big winter storm on Thursday. In Central Park, 19 inches of snow fell. That makes January the snowiest month in New York in more than 85 years.

◆ Authorities say Mexican smugglers tried to use a huge "medieval-style" catapult to hurl drugs north across the U.S. border.
