NATIONAL & WORLD NEWS

- ◆ When it comes to retirement, a new survey shows many middle class Americans say 80 is the new 65 and they now plan to delay retirement because of worries over money.
- ◆ The number of people seeking unemployment benefits last week fell to the lowest level in seven months, but concerns about Europe's debt crisis trumped that good news. The Dow Jones Industrial Average was down 134.64 at 11,770.95.
- ◆ There was a scare aboard a Delta flight from Asheville, N.C., to New York Wednesday night after the pilot got trapped inside the plane's lavatory by a faulty lock. The pilot banged on the door and instructed a passenger to alert the co-pilot. But the co-pilot refused to open the cockpit door because the man had a thick foreign accent. Instead, the co-pilot radioed air traffic controllers that the pilot had disappeared in the back and someone with a foreign accent was trying to get into the cockpit. They ordered the plane to make an emergency landing. Before the plane landed, though, the captain broke the lavatory lock and freed himself.
- ◆ A consumer watchdog group has issued its annual list of dangerous toys. The list includes the "Z-Curve Bow," "Fold & Go Trampoline," and the "Sword Fighting Jack Sparrow" figurine.
