NATIONAL & WORLD NEWS

◆ Under Florida's "stand your ground" law, George Zimmerman has waived his right to a pretrial hearing over whether he should be acquitted of murder charges. Zimmerman is charged with second-degree murder in the killing of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin. The trial is set for early June.

◆ In the murder trial of Dr. Kermit Gosnell, a Philadelphia jury ended its first day of deliberations yesterday without reaching verdicts. Gosnell is accused of killing babies born alive and a patient during late-term abortions at a clinic serving low-income women. He could face the death penalty if convicted.

◆ Raminah Behbehanian faces attempted murder charges after police say she tried to sneak orange juice bottles spiked with a lethal amount of rubbing alcohol inside a Starbucks. Behbehanian, 50, was arrested late Monday after a customer reported seeing the woman take two bottles of orange juice from her bag and place them in an open-air refrigerated display case at a Starbucks in San Jose, California.

◆ In order to get U.S. astronauts into space, NASA is paying $424 million more to Russia. This represents flights to and from the International Space Station aboard Russian Soyuz spacecraft, as well as training for six astronauts in 2016 and the first half of 2017. Russia's ticket prices have soared with each new contract as it is currently the only means of getting people to and from the space station. NASA is unable to launch people into space after the Obama Administration scuttled the Space Shuttle program in 2011. Private companies are vying to launch humans into space by 2015.
